

Consent form

The Canadian Journal of Dental Hygiene follows the ethical considerations as stated by the International Council of Medical Journals and Editors in respecting a patient's right to privacy and confidentiality in publication of any identifying text and images.

Uniform requirements for manuscripts submitted to biomedical journals:

II.E. Privacy and Confidentiality

II. E.1. Patients and Study Participants

Patients have a right to privacy that should not be infringed without informed consent. Identifying information, including patients' names, initials, or hospital numbers, should not be published in written descriptions, photographs, and pedigrees unless the information is essential for scientific purposes and the patient (or parent or guardian) gives written informed consent for publication. Informed consent for this purpose requires that a patient who is identifiable be shown the manuscript to be published. Authors should disclose to these patients whether any potential identifiable material might be available via the Internet as well as in print after publication.

Identifying details should be omitted if they are not essential. Complete anonymity is difficult to achieve, however, and informed consent should be obtained if there is any doubt. For example, masking the eye region in photographs of patients is inadequate protection of anonymity. If identifying characteristics are altered to protect anonymity, such as in genetic pedigrees, authors should provide assurance that alterations do not distort scientific meaning and editors should so note.

refusal to sign this form will not affect their care in any way.

Signed consent

I hereby give my consent for image(s) or other clinical information or both relating to my case to be reported in the Canadian Journal of Dental Hygiene as part of the material in the article mentioned above. I understand that the image(s) and/or text will be published in print and online. I understand that while every effort will be made to ensure patient's anonymity, complete anonymity cannot be guaranteed.

I also consent for the material to be used in other publications that may approach the Canadian Journal of Dental Hygiene provided that the material is not used for advertising or packaging and that the material will not be used out of context.
