

Duality of interest form

Authors submitting manuscripts for consideration to the Canadian Journal of Dental Hygiene must declare any competing interests they may have in their submission, and complete this form in the interests of transparency. Competing interests may be financial, personal, or consultative. The intent of this disclosure is to help readers form their own assessments of potential bias in the manuscript. In cases where the authors declare a competing interest, a short statement to that effect is published as part of the printed article, under "Acknowledgement". If no such statement is present in their submission, the authors have declared to the editors of the journal that they do not have any competing interests.
