MISSION

The Canadian Dental Hygienists Association exists so that its members are able to provide quality preventive and therapeutic oral health care as well as health promotion for the Canadian public.

OVERVIEW

Serving the profession since 1963, the Canadian Dental Hygienists Association (CDHA) is the collective national voice of 26,850 dental hygienists, directly representing more than 17,000 individual members. Dental hygienists are primary health care providers who work in a variety of settings, including independent practice, educating and empowering Canadians of all ages to embrace their oral health for better overall health and well-being. They are key partners in health promotion and disease prevention.

Over the past 50 years, CDHA has built on the strength, passion, and dedication of its members to move the profession forward through advocacy work, public education campaigns, and support of research and education. The 2013–2014 annual report highlights the results of those efforts during the past fiscal year.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Members, colleagues, and friends,

Welcome to the beginning of the ends! Earlier this year, in order to ensure that all Canadian Dental Hygienists Association (CDHA) policy, decision making, and operational activities align with the association's mandate, the board of directors established four specific outcomes referred to as "ends." As a result of this strategic planning initiative, all CDHA decisions and activities are now categorized, measured, and evaluated by their ability to move the association towards these ends. This approach will provide more clarity and guidance to decision making, as well as a new level of accountability to membership.

The first end pertains to the public policy environment surrounding dental hygiene, and CDHA has been very busy educating and advocating on many fronts. For example, CDHA has continued its efforts to reduce public policy barriers to registered dental hygienists' practising as primary health care providers by developing key messaging and an Advocacy Toolkit, and undertaking a coordinated lobbying effort on Parliament Hill. CDHA is working to improve oral health services for underserved peoples and communities of northern Canada by lobbying members of Parliament and health ministers for improved access to care, and by providing advocacy toolkits to CDHA members in the North. CDHA has contracts to provide dental hygiene services to remote communities in Nunavut and the Sioux Lookout Zone of northern Ontario. CDHA reached an agreement with Hockey Canada to provide promotional materials on sports mouthguards, and grassroots promotion continues by members through the use of the Sports Mouthguard Toolkit. Finally, CDHA continues to speak out in favour of community water fluoridation and provide support to communities and jurisdictions that question its effectiveness.

The second end relates to the value provided by CDHA members and the need to ensure that their work is recognized and understood by the general public. Through a broad but costeffective media campaign, CDHA helps the public understand the connection between oral health and overall health, and how their dental hygienist can help them. This year's targeted media campaign involved diverse approaches, including paid newspaper advertisements and editorial content, feature articles on oral health issues for general media access and use, and educational/ promotional videos for targeted play. Over 50 media outlets from across Canada aired segments or ran articles based on CDHA media releases or interviews with CDHA members this past year. PR News, an American-based publication, even named CDHA's sports mouthguard awareness campaign as a finalist in its "PR on a Shoestring Budget" category. Perhaps the jewel in CDHA's promotional campaign crown was this year's National Dental Hygienists Week™. CDHA received congratulations from Prime Minister Stephen Harper, Minister of Health Rona Ambrose, and an official declaration of the week was made in the House of Commons.

The third end involves ensuring that members develop the confidence and have the resources to work independently, intra and interprofessionally as an integral part of the health care team. Towards this end, CDHA now offers a comprehensive set of key support services that all members should be aware of and use. This past year, CDHA introduced an Employee and Family Assistance Program which provides free counselling and wellness services to members and their family. CDHA also provides members with access to a financial planning service program, professional liability insurance, and support for employment issues, school programs, and continuing education. In addition, CDHA conducted seminars addressing issues unique to independent practice and supported efforts to ensure continued coverage of dental hygiene services in some insurance compensation plans. CDHA serves as members' collective voice and represents their interests at conferences, meetings, tradeshows, committee and key working group meetings hosted by a wide range of oral health, public health, and business entities.

The fourth and final end pertains to professional knowledge. CDHA endeavours to ensure that members are able to create, contribute to, and use a body of professional knowledge and research. We take pride in providing a platform from which members can connect and learn, and this past year CDHA continued to be busy. CDHA publishes the Canadian Journal of Dental Hygiene, a quarterly scientific journal showcasing the latest research and advances in oral health involving dental hygienists, and Oh Canada!, a quarterly contemporary magazine for current issues relevant to our profession. CDHA also publishes twice-monthly e-newsletters, hosts numerous topic-driven webinars for members, releases clarifying positions statements, and conducts, supports, and participates in various conferences and workshops. The state of knowledge in our profession is not static; it is dynamic and it is growing. We encourage you to take advantage of these important developmental opportunities.

These ends do not mark the end of the association's achievements this past year, however. In collaboration with members, CDHA developed and published a professional identity statement. In two succinct and visionary sentences, this statement captures the essence of who we are as dental hygienists and what we are here to do. To comply with the recently revised Canadian Not-for-profit Corporations Act, the board of directors approved new association bylaws and, at the 2013 annual general meeting, CDHA membership approved and enacted them. And finally, as CDHA and its services have grown, so too has the need for facilities to make them happen. CDHA headquarters have recently moved to new offices located just a stone's throw away from Parliament Hill in Ottawa. Welcome home, CDHA!

These numerous member services, events, and professional development and promotion endeavours do not just happen; they are the result of the tireless efforts of many people united in the cause of supporting our membership and furthering the dental hygiene profession. Thank you to the board of directors for your leadership, dedication, and selfless efforts to build a strong association and profession. I appreciate your support, your counsel, and your friendship. Thank you to those who served on CDHA committees for volunteering your time and your talents. Thank you to CDHA's administrative staff, who work behind the scenes to turn our mandates and objectives into reality. To all, please extend this gratitude to your families and friends for their patience, understanding, and support, which make it possible for you to do what you do.

Most importantly, thank you to you, our CDHA membership, for your continued support. It has truly been my privilege to represent you and to serve our association and this wonderful profession of ours.

Yours in service,

Mary Bertone, RDH, BSc(DH)

CDHA President 2013–2014

OUR NEW HOME

On April 7, 2014, after 20 years in a small three-story office on Centrepointe Drive in Ottawa, CDHA staff moved to a new, larger building on Wellington Street West just minutes from Parliament Hill. The sale of the old building, renovations to the new office space, and the move were completed on time and on budget.

CDHA's board of directors has established four specific, measurable outcomes called "ends," towards which all of the association's decisions and activities are directed.

END #1: PUBLIC POLICY ENVIRONMENT

Public policy barriers are reduced to ensure members can practise as primary health care providers.

In 2013–2014, CDHA continued its efforts to remove the barriers that prevent registered dental hygienists from practising as primary health care providers. In collaboration with its government relations consultant, CDHA developed a set of eight key oral health messages to inform conversations with government and elected officials. These messages emphasize the importance of a cost-effective and fully accessible oral health care system; improvements to oral health as stimulus for the economy; investments in public health human resources; expanding the supply of dental hygienists in remote areas; orofacial injury prevention; the oral health of older adults; and community water fluoridation.

CDHA also organized a highly successful "Lobby Day" on Parliament Hill for CDHA board directors, who met with 15 members of Parliament from across Canada and from all major parties to raise awareness of the need for investments in oral disease prevention and oral health promotion.

Recognizing that its success in political advocacy depends heavily on grassroots efforts to educate elected officials on the vital role that dental hygienists play in Canada's health care system, CDHA developed an Advocacy Toolkit—including its key oral health messages—for its members. The toolkit's many resources are designed to keep governments focused on oral health care as a priority for Canadians.

In addition to its ongoing efforts to educate policy and decision makers on the role that dental hygienists play in supporting the health and well-being of all Canadians, CDHA pursued advocacy work in several targeted areas.

ADVOCACY TOOLKIT Developed for CDHA members

Focus on the North

Over the past year, CDHA extended its reach into Northern Canada, improving access to oral health care for some of this country's most remote communities through a variety of means.

- CDHA sent letters to all MPs and ministers of health in the North regarding access to care for dental hygiene services.
- CDHA developed an Advocacy in the North Toolkit, which was sent to all of its members in the North.
- CDHA called for increased investments in oral disease prevention programs for First Nations and Inuit communities in its pre-budget proposal to the federal minister of finance.
- CDHA signed a contract with the Government of Nunavut to provide dental hygiene services in 19 communities for children between the ages of 0 and 7. The first dental hygienist contractor flew to Clyde River in February; the second flew to Cape Dorset in April.
- CDHA worked with a representative from Inuit Tapiriit Kanatami to translate CDHA educational materials (Healthy Smiles for Babies, Ten Tips for Healthy Teeth, and the association's colouring/ activity sheet for children) into Inuktitut.
- CDHA's agreement for Sioux Lookout Zone was extended until July 31, 2014.

Orofacial Injury Prevention

Building on the success of last year's public awareness campaign to promote the use of sports mouthguards, CDHA made a presentation to Hockey Canada's Risk Management Committee in November 2013 in Calgary. Following that presentation, Hockey Canada posted a link to CDHA's materials on sports mouthguards on their website under the "Safety Essentials" section.

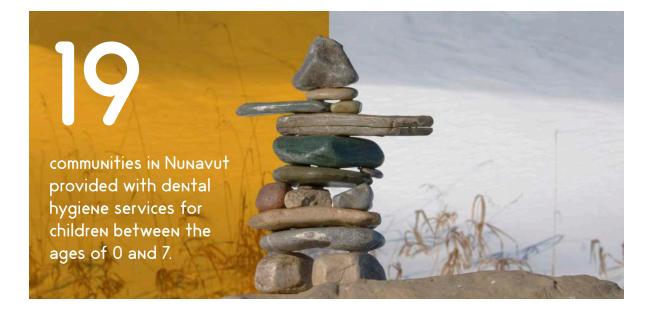

CDHA's president and senior staff also met with the Honourable Bal Gosal (Minister of State for Sport) to discuss the role of dental hygienists in sports injury prevention. Minister Gosal agreed to send a letter to national sport organizations in support of CDHA's sports mouthguard campaign.

CDHA's Sports Mouthguard Toolkit is being used by members as well as local public health units and non-profit organizations across Canada.

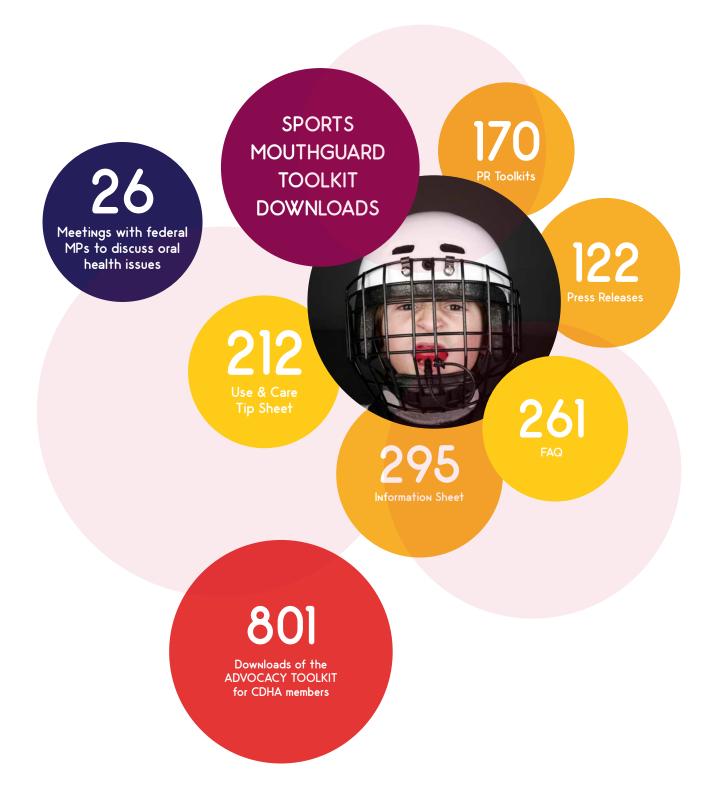

Water Fluoridation

Despite the consensus among health professionals and agencies worldwide that community water fluoridation (CWF) is a highly beneficial and cost-effective public health intervention, many communities in Canada still oppose the addition of fluoride to drinking water. CDHA continues to publicize the benefits of CWF and write letters of support to communities whose antifluoridation activist groups threaten the implementation of this vital public health initiative.

While CDHA accomplishes many advocacy efforts on its own, the association also places a high value on collaborative advocacy. To that end, CDHA remains an active member of the Canadian Coalition for Public Health in the 21st Century (CCPH21) and the Health Action Lobby (HEAL).

END #1: BY THE NUMBERS

END #2: PUBLIC RECOGNITION

Members' value is recognized by the Canadian public.

CDHA strives to educate Canadians on the work of dental hygienists and the important links between oral and overall health. Through media releases, print and television interviews, and social media connections, CDHA aims to ensure that dental hygienists are recognized by the public as partners in health promotion and disease prevention. In 2013–2014, CDHA media releases drew attention to the connections between oral health and diabetes, aging, smoking and tobacco use, nutrition and dietary choices, cancer, and heart disease. Other releases celebrated the achievements of dental hygienists as award and scholarship winners, conference presenters, and volunteers working at home and abroad to improve the oral health of vulnerable populations.

NATIONAL DENTAL HYGIENISTS WEEK[™] 2014

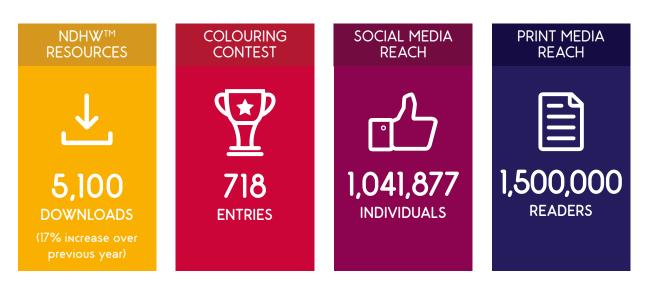

National Dental Hygienists Week[™] (NDHW[™]) took place from April 6 to 12 and was CDHA's most successful campaign to date. Activity on Twitter and Facebook, coupled with print advertisements in major metropolitan newspapers in every province and in the Yukon, increased the visibility of the profession in dramatic fashion. CDHA also received congratulatory letters from Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Minister of Health Rona Ambrose. For the first time, a declaration of the week was made in the House of Commons by NDP Deputy Health Critic Dany Morin.

END #3: PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE

Members have the confidence and resources to work independently, intraprofessionally, and interprofessionally as an integral part of the health care team.

Dental hygiene continues to rank sixth in size among the registered health professions in Canada. CDHA's member benefits support dental hygienists in all aspects of their professional and personal lives.

CDHA introduced a new Employee and Family Assistance Program for members and their eligible relatives. This free, confidential counselling and wellness service is provided through Homewood Human Solutions[™] and offers a broad range of personal, work-related, health, and family counselling services and resources over the telephone or online.

CDHA negotiated a new financial planning service program with Sun Life.

CDHA changed the Advisor of Record for professional liability insurance from Aon to BMS.

CDHA continues to offer telephone and webbased support to members who have questions or concerns about employment and workplace issues, school programs, continuing education, and independent practice.

Independent Practice

Over the past year, CDHA's dental hygiene practice team fielded regular questions from independent dental hygienists regarding fees, codes, procedures, business planning, and marketing. In support of these independent practitioners, CDHA also offered four sessions on independent practice at its national conference in October 2013, presented a seminar on independent practice to graduating students at Algonquin College in Ottawa, and updated its independent practice certificate courses on the website.

E-claims developments

CDHA began working with the Telus Network to implement electronic claims transmissions for Great West Life, Desjardins Financial, Medavie Blue Cross, and Accerta.

CDHA prepared a document, in collaboration with provincial registrars and executive directors, supporting continued coverage of dental hygiene services in Medavie Blue Cross's compensation plans.

Intra and Interprofessional Practice

CDHA is committed to building collaborative relationships with associations and organizations that support oral health professionals across Canada, and participates actively in conferences, meetings, trade shows, committees, and working groups.

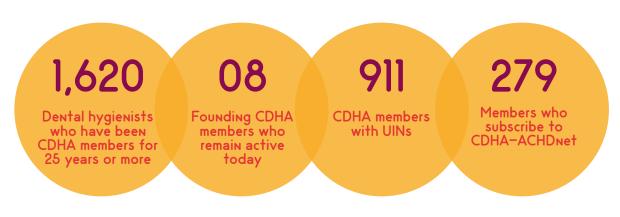

CDHA staffed information booths at the Ontario Dental Association's annual spring meeting in May 2013, at CRDHA's continuing education event also in May 2013, at the MDHA and NLDHA annual general meetings in June 2013, and at the Pacific Dental Conference in March 2014.

CDHA prepared a submission to the College of Dental Hygienists of Ontario on its study of oral care in that province.

Canadian Association of Public Health Dentistry

CDHA and CAPHD leaders continue to discuss potential opportunities for collaboration on advocacy for community water fluoridation; access to care for seniors and northern communities; and sustained funding for dental public health.

END #3: BY THE NUMBERS

Canadian Coalition for Action on Tobacco Products

CDHA is a member of the CCATP and has met with Health Canada to discuss tobacco taxation, warning labels, e-cigarettes, and flavoured products.

Canadian Dental Association

CDHA is now a contributor to the Canadian Dental Association (CDA)'s OASIS online education portal, and has provided a link to the Your Job Shouldn't be a Pain in the Neck warm-up and stretching guide from the OASIS site.

CDA's National Oral Care Action Plan brought together representatives from a cross-section of national organizations to discuss the oral health status of Canadians in February 2014. Participants, including CDHA, established three priority areas for shared advocacy efforts: community water fluoridation; seniors in long-term care facilities; and children.

Job Market & Employment Survey 2013

CDHA's biennial job market and employment survey was launched in November 2013. Over 5,400 dental hygienists, representing close to 34% of CDHA membership, responded to the survey. The data collected will help dental hygienists when negotiating employment terms and will allow CDHA to tailor its member benefits to the needs of the profession.

Professional Identity

After extensive consultation, online voting, and focus testing, CDHA's professional identity statement was released in April. The official launch was supported by an article and large folded poster insert in the spring 2014 edition of Oh Canada!, a web page and banner, Facebook cover photo, pens and floss dispensers featuring the identity statement for distribution at events, and an editorial in the May 2014 issue of the Canadian Journal of Dental Hygiene.

CDHA's biennial national conference in October 2013 provided an ideal venue for celebrating the profession.

- A session on professionalism was offered as part of the pre-conference Educators' workshop.
- 89 of the 1,620 CDHA members who have been active for 25 years or more received recognition certificates and anniversary pins during the awards luncheon.
- Eight founding members who continue to be active today were honoured for their 50 years of service with a special presentation. These members are Anne Bosy (Olesko), Pat Johnson (Prior), Carol Kline, Marg Miller (Andris), Marlene Bulas (Miller), Carole Ono, Marnie Forgay, and Margaret Berry MacLean.

I AM A DENTAL HYGIENIST. I EDUCATE AND EMPOWER CANADIANS TO EMBRACE THEIR ORAL HEALTH FOR BETTER OVERALL HEALTH AND WELL-BEING.

END #4: PROFESSIONAL KNOWLEDGE

Members create, contribute to, and utilize a growing body of professional knowledge and research.

From its flagship publications, the Canadian Journal of Dental Hygiene and Oh Canada!, to its position statements, conferences, workshops, and webinars, CDHA offers a variety of opportunities for members to contribute to and learn from the latest in oral health research and education. Knowledge generation and translation are essential to the universal recognition and understanding of dental hygiene as a primary health care profession.

Publications

This past fiscal year witnessed many exciting changes and improvements to CDHA publications. The Canadian Journal of Dental Hygiene launched a book review program, and an ethics policy was drafted and approved by the editorial board. The firstever print edition of Oh Canada! was published in September 2013 in celebration of the association's 50th anniversary. CDHA's biweekly enewsletters remain a popular source of information for members. The readership "open rate" for this digital publication is consistently at 60%.

50th Anniversary Conference: Celebrating Our Roots...Our Wings

A total of 588 individuals registered for CDHA's biennial national conference in Toronto in October 2013. Delegates participated in a robust program of scientific, keynote, and breakout sessions, culminating in the 50th anniversary celebration dinner at the CN Tower. In addition, CDHA offered four pre-conference workshops as well as a "Meet the Editors" breakfast.

Continuing Education

Online courses

- CDHA's self-initiation courses for dental hygienists in Nova Scotia and Ontario were reviewed and revised in 2013–2014. New exams, in both English and French, were posted to the website.
- The independent practice course series was updated.
- The elder abuse and oral cancer awareness courses remain popular among members.

Webinar topics in 2013–2014

- CDHA professional liability insurance
- demystifying claims & codes
- effectiveness of fluoride varnishes and sealants for preventing dental caries
- highlights of the job market & employment survey
- introduction to lasers
- oral probiotics in everyday practice
- the role of dental hygiene in implant maintenance
- therapeutic oral rinsing

Dental Hygiene Education Programs

CDHA launched its second Educators' Survey in order to build on the baseline data from 2011. The survey results will further assist the association in understanding and responding to the issues and trends affecting dental hygiene educators across Canada.

Canadian competencies for baccalaureate dental hygiene education

CDHA worked with a consultant and convened a committee of key stakeholders to identify a competency profile for 4-year baccalaureate dental hygiene education in Canada. Because dental hygiene education in Canada is quite diverse, varying in program length and credentials offered, this project was undertaken to promote consistency across 4-year dental hygiene baccalaureate programs and will be completed in Fall 2014.

Online Communities

- During the past year, CDHA's First Nations' community and Public Health community were merged as there were many members and interests in common.
- The Independent Practice community continues to be one of the most active. Discussions encompass billing fees, dental hygiene codes, insurance claim processes and problems, marketing, advertising, and networking.
- The Educators' community remains very active and supportive of each other's efforts to educate dental hygiene professionals.
- CDHA introduced the Advocacy online community in conjunction with the launch of the Advocacy Toolkit, in order to keep members connected on advocacy efforts across the country.
- In order to ensure the integrity of all its online communities, CDHA developed an Online Community Code of Conduct and Policies.

Research

- CDHA's research advisory committee has begun developing evidence-informed research priorities and a research agenda for the association.
- CDHA encouraged its members to participate in a Canadian Memorial Chiropractic College (CMCC) research study on ergonomics in dental hygiene care, which involved field observations in dental offices and laboratory analysis.

END #4.1: MEMBERS ARE AWARE OF AND HAVE ACCESS TO NATIONAL PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS.

Position Statement and Practice Guideline on Interdental Brushing

Pauline Imai's 2012 systematic review article on interdental brushing and flossing led directly to the development of CDHA's position statement and practice guideline on the same topic, both of which were endorsed by the board of directors and posted on CDHA's website in English and French for reading and downloading.

END #4.2: MEMBERS' (ESPECIALLY STUDENT MEMBERS') POTENTIAL FOR PROFESSIONAL LEADERSHIP IS DEVELOPED.

Dental Hygiene Students

CDHA's Student Information Survey revealed that there were 3,718 students enrolled in dental hygiene programs in 2013–2014 (based on responses from 37 schools). CDHA remains committed to engaging these students and relied heavily on its student representatives over the past year.

- Student representatives helped to promote CDHA initiatives, such as the Student Essay Award contest, the Colgate-Palmolive–CDHA $500 academic admission scholarship program, and the recruitment and renewal of CDHA student members.
- Senior student leaders served as mentors for newly recruited junior representatives.
- Over 100 students registered for the student ownership linkage session at CDHA's national conference.

The 2013 CDHA Leadership Award, sponsored by DENTSPLY, was presented to Jeremy Huynh, a CDHA student representative from UBC.

MEMBERSHIP BY THE NUMBERS

The 2013–2014 membership campaign highlighted CDHA's 50 years as the national voice of dental hygienists. As of April 30, 2014, CDHA had 17,231 members, which represents an increase of 554 over the previous fiscal year.
